

28/9/06      Aged lady robbed!

Torny Jensen from Southern Star reported recently the callous and low action of two young men. (See Southern Star Paper, September 27th 2006 Vol. 25, No. 39).

An elderly pensioner was walking peacefully down the road. Two young men were apparently walking ahead of her. One of the young men, allegedly dropped his hood, turned and charged at the female pensioner. He ripped her handbag away and took off with his mate.

Where are our society morals going? To hell.

Why can't our university professors clearly say what is right and what is wrong any more?

They get caught up in fancy words and tricky fantasies to show our young minds why there is no such thing as ABSOLUTE TRUTH.

I am sorry society, but this is what I have to say to the young men who did this crime.

It was WRONG to STEAL that poor aged ladies handbag.
It was WRONG to COVET what did not belong to you.

You had no right to take what was not yours.

I hear people complaining about our government and our police; I hear it all the time. Yes there is corruption and yes there are mistakes. But the law is the law, and police MUST and SHALL enforce it.

We as good aussie citizens must learn to obey and honour our moral law, and to uphold our troops, our police officers and government with honour. We ought to teach our children to honour the moral code of life. Let them learn that there is peace in ones life, when you obey your conscience.

I am sitting here, completing my tax paperwork which I have neglected to complete. I am worthy of a fine and trouble. I acknowledge that. I'm trying to sort it out, and get it right for all the good aussies who did get their tax sorted out on time! My conscience is at work, and shored up by a strong Tax Notice. I have committed crimes in my life, things which I am ashamed of. I have broken all the Ten Commandments, making me a criminal. But I agree with the law, and I think it is good. Which of you criminals will admit your offence, and admit that the law is good which punishes you? Until you realise the law is good, you will never genuinely beg for mercy. If you think your so good, and are judging me while you read this. Go find a bible and read the ten commandments, you will quickly find yourself a law breaker as well.

I don't think any criminal can ever rest from their conscience. It must be such a feverish activity to keep oneself distracted from persistent internal conviction.

But then their desire for self-gratification simply drives them on and on, doing as they please. Perhaps they do this to distract themselves from their conscience. Surely judgement must come to stop this plague of wrongness, especially against our little ones and our precious wise older people.

Australia is beautiful and full of wise older people, but who will listen to them. Who will listen to the old ways, the way of life?

I admire the brilliant courage of Brave Lorrain, who shines like a light to the aged people now living in fear. She says she won't let it bother her. Good on you Lorain!

For us, we have a job to do. Stand up Australia and stand up against that which is wrong! Support your coppers and encourage them. Law Enforcers, I Salute You. – Peace Out.

Josh Mitchell - Christian Missionary to Coopers Plains
Thursday, 28 September 2006